GLOBAL COMPASS LEADERSHIP AWARD

The Global Compass Leadership Award is given to an IFE intern, fellow, or other outstanding young person who has demonstrated, on a sustained basis, exceptional leadership, initiative, innovative thinking, and entrepreneurship in enhancing global perspectives, understanding, and connectivity.

Jenny Shore, the first recipient of the Global Compass Leadership Award, is the Founder of NEXT GEN and an IFE intern. She has studied Arabic, Hebrew, and French at an advanced level. In addition, she is a classically trained pianist who has played at embassies and other prominent locations throughout Washington, DC. Following her high school graduation last May, she interned at Al Jazeera Arabic. Currently, she is an intern at CBS News' "60 Minutes." Jenny plans to attend college in the fall and recently was accepted at Harvard University.

NEXT GEN is a forum for Institute for Education interns and D.C. area high school and college students to meet with national and international political, business, and cultural leaders to exchange ideas with impact.

NEXT GENers have frank and open discussions with game changers to learn about future trends and opportunities in an expanding global environment. NEXT GEN partners with the Pulitzer Center on Crisis Reporting and is modeled after IFE's flagship program, INFO Public Policy Roundtable, which is a mainstay in the Washington public policy arena, having hosted more than 250 prominent thought leaders as speakers over the past two decades.

NEXT GEN, now in its third year, has heard from speakers including: Nurit Bar-Josef, Concertmaster, National Symphony Orchestra; Marcus Brauchli, Executive Editor, The Washington Post; R. David Edelman, Senior Advisor for Internet Policy, The White House; Juliet Eilperin, The Washington Post; Dr. Abderrahim Foukara, Washington Bureau Chief, Al Jazeera Arabic; Dan Froomkin, Senior Washington Correspondent, The Huffington Post; Nick Gaines, Founder, GovHub; and Dr. Michael Whitmore, Director, Folger Shakespeare Library. Sponsors include: Starbucks, Chipotle Mexican Grill, and ZBurger.
